这部纪录片与英国广播公司旗下著名的自然历史部的那些巨制惊人地相似。但这一次，那个熟悉的旁白声（戴维·阿滕伯勒）传递出了不一样的信息。片中，（对自然的）敬畏中总是略带内疚，惊奇中总是掺杂着担忧，消遣中总是伴随着不安。

After seeing a pair of mating fossas –a giant, lemur-hunting, Madagascan mongoose–we're told that the very forests we just saw have since been destroyed.

《我们的星球》以一种反复、直观并且急迫的方式提醒着观众们，这些他们在观赏着的奇观正在受到人类活动的威胁。在看完一对交配的马岛獾（一种巨大的、以狐猴为食的马达加斯加獾）之后，我们就会得知，刚刚看到的那片森林后来就被破坏了。

That's not to say that Our Planet is a dour, finger-wagging downer— far from it. It is hard not to cheer as an initially incompetent Philippines eagle takes her first flight, or laugh as a tree shrew uses a pitcher plant as a toilet, or marvel at two Arabian leopards meeting and mating—1 percent of the species' surviving individuals, perhaps creating a few more. Most of the series is still joyful, but it is never allowed to be naively so.

但这并不是说《我们的星球》是一部冷冰冰的、充满斥责且让人感到悲伤的纪录片——事实上，它远非如此。当最初弱小无力的菲律宾鹰第一次展翅高飞时，你很难不为她欢呼；当树鼯把猪笼草当成马桶的时候，你很难不开怀大笑；当两只阿拉伯豹相遇并交配的时候，你很难不为之惊叹——作为该物种幸存个体的 1%，它们也许能繁衍出几个后代。总体来说这部纪录片
